Long Night of Training: The BAUER Group Invites Visitors to Learn About Its Wide Range of Vocational Training Programs

Schrobenhausen, Germany – Which vocational training program is right for me? To find the answer to this question, it may be worth visiting the Long Night of Training. On Friday, September 18, the BAUER Training Center at BAUER-Strasse 2 in Schrobenhausen, Germany, will open its doors at 5:30 p.m. Interested young people and their parents can learn about the region's largest training provider.

For the past ten years, the company has offered the opportunity to talk with trainers and trainees in a relaxed atmosphere and learn about the 17 vocational training programs that BAUER offers in Schrobenhausen alone. At numerous interactive stations – such as the drilling rig simulator or the forge – students can try their skills and discover which career best suits their interests and abilities.

At 6:15 p.m. and 8:30 p.m., Training Manager Gerhard Piske will give short presentations providing informative insights into the diverse vocational training programs and career opportunities at BAUER. As a special highlight, visitors can look forward to a live demonstration of a drilling rig at 8:00 p.m. on the factory grounds in Aresing. Visitors are encouraged to take the free bus transfer departing at 7:45 p.m. For more information, visit <https://www.bauer.de/en/training-bauer>.
